GROW YOUR UNDERSTANDING, EXPERTISE, AND IMPACT

The Certificate in Early Childhood Policy provides students with a greater understanding of early childhood development issues and the expertise to apply that knowledge to policies affecting young children and their caregivers. The certificate program focuses on preparing students to take on leadership roles in government and organizations that shape policy.

THE CERTIFICATE IS IDEAL FOR

• Currently enrolled graduate students seeking to enhance their knowledge and skills in a policy area of growing importance
• Early childhood practitioners and educators seeking professional development with flexibility of a shorter credential program
• Government or nonprofit managers, community organizers, and policy analysts
• Prospective students exploring the possibility of beginning a regular graduate degree program

THE BENEFITS

• Increases understanding of early childhood development issues and their impact on policy formation
• Advances understanding of the economics of investment in early learning and the effect on reducing the achievement gap
• Harnesses the University of Minnesota’s cutting-edge research with Humphrey School faculty experts in this field
• Connects students with policymakers and non-profits organizations working on early childhood policy for internships and research opportunities
• Offers courses taught by faculty members from across the University who are engaged in important early childhood policy research, including Art Rolnick, Nora Slawik, Cathy Jordan, Arthur Reynolds, Scott McConnell, and more
• Enhances your capacity to develop sound public policy to support our youngest citizens
• Provides access to programming through the Human Capital Research Collaborative, a collaboration between the Federal Reserve Bank and the University of Minnesota
