Constituent correspondence, interchanges with other members of Congress, staff memoranda, bills, statements, clippings, and miscellany documenting Mondale's support of efforts to change the Seaway's financial structure in order to make it less dependent on user tolls. The Saint Lawrence Seaway Act of 1954 established the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation and made it responsible for repaying the revenue bonds that financed the U.S. portion of the Seaway's construction costs, as well as for bearing the expenses of operating and maintaining the Seaway. By 1966, user tolls were proving inadequate to support these expenses, and Canadian and U.S. authorities proposed a 10% increase in tolls. Seaway users objected strongly, especially arguing the unfairness of government support of ports and airway systems through appropriations while compelling its users to support the seaway. Congress members from the upper Midwest supported their position. Mondale introduced a bill (S.3698) in 1966 that was designed to mitigate the SLSDC's financial burdens by converting its revenue bonds to capital stock and by providing federal appropriations for Seaway maintenance. In 1967, he introduced a revised version of this bill (S.1455), and co-sponsored a bill (S.2131) to authorize rehabilitation of locks and appurtenant structures via appropriation of federal funds. This legislation did not pass, but in 1967 U.S. and Canadian authorities agreed to a four-year moratorium on Seaway tolls pending further analysis of its financial structure. Correspondence and Miscellany, 1966-1967. 2 folders. S.3698 Hearings and Testimony, June-Sept. 1966. The agencies replied with tabulations in varying degrees of detail, often accompanied by program descriptions. Mondale's staff then tabulated the expenditure data: by county and thereunder by agency and program. There are two tabulations, one typescript and one handwritten; they include much duplicative information, but each contains considerable data that is not present in the other.
