GLOBAL PUBLIC POLICY

2020-2021 MPP Concentration Information

The MPP Global Public Policy concentration equips students with the essential knowledge, skills, and perspectives they need to launch careers as global professionals. Students gain a solid foundation of knowledge and relevant skills in areas including U.S. foreign and global security policy, international development policy, and global human rights and humanitarianism. Students interested in the Global Public Policy concentration should schedule meetings with faculty advisors and with area head Mary Curtin to discuss their academic and career goals.

GPP concentration students must take a minimum of nine credits in Global Policy Area courses, including PA 5801 Global Public Policy, plus six additional Global Policy Area credits from the list below. Students may follow any of the approved MPP pathways to fulfill MPP methods requirements.

It is strongly recommended that students take one of the following MPP core course options as their second economics course:

1. APEC 5751 Global Trade and Policy (Smith) (Spring) NOTE: PA 5805 Global Economics (Kudrle) (3 cr) will not be offered in Fall 2020.
2. PA 5503 Economics of Development (Assaad) (3 cr). (Offered in Fall)
3. PA 5521 Development Planning and Policy Analysis (4 cr). (Offered in Spring)

Students may do a capstone (preferably the Global Policy/Human Rights/Development Practice capstone) or professional paper.

Alternate courses must be approved by the Global Policy Area chair. Some courses are not offered every year. Courses are grouped by themes that students should consider in planning their concentration.

Students may also want to consider the Graduate Minor in Human Rights or in Law.
