Course Overview

What are the best ways of dealing with conflicting rights and interests around infrastructure projects on Indigenous and ethnic territories? What needs to be considered for building a land case as a human rights case? What remedies are needed when structural necessities remain unattended and aggravate the human rights violations? In this class participants will have opportunities to develop their conceptual and practical skills for better advocating Indigenous and ethnic communities' rights in conflict with so-called "development" projects in the Global North and the Global South.

Friday, 2:30-6:30 pm
4/8 and 4/22-4/29, HHH 184

Instructor is Diana Quintero, Visiting Human Rights Engaged Scholar.

Questions about the course? Email quint100@umn.edu. Need a class permission number? Email Stacey Grimes at grime004@umn.edu.

Who Should Take This Course?

The workshop is appropriate for those graduate students interested in enhancing their capacities for engaging in Human Rights work from an international and comparative perspective.